THA President Identifies Challenges for 2009

At a recent staff meeting, I presented my thoughts for the Texas Hospital Association in 2009, and I discussed various factors impacting health care. THA's mantra for 2009 is "Change, Consistency and Steadfast," and I believe these terms apply well to TAHV. There is no question that change is in the air, from the economy to the leadership in Washington and in the Texas House of Representatives. "Change" has been the buzz word for the last 18 months, and in the last four or five months, it intensified as the economy spiraled downward.

Consistency is something on which we all need to work. Just as THA strives for consistency in meeting our members' needs, volunteers work to be consistently available to meet patients' needs in our hospitals, from the nursing floors to waiting rooms for ICUs and surgery.

I told the THA staff that we must be steadfast as we go through tough economic times and steadfast in our resolve to do and accomplish our mission, be it in advocacy, family care or education. Being steadfast is a challenge because hospitals' situations are changing, our leadership is changing and the generations that populate our volunteers are changing. I know that recruitment is an issue all across the state, yet you remain steadfast in your mission and steadfast in answering the challenge of working in our hospitals.

The renowned football coach Vince Lombardi often said, "Achievements in an organization are the results of the combined efforts of each individual." Hospitals and associations are similar. We must be involved with change, we must be consistent in our delivery, and we must be steadfast in our approach to our hospitals and to the people that serve in our organizations. This is the challenge for 2009 – "Change, Consistency and Steadfast."

Thank you for the work you do on behalf of patients and our hospitals.

THE TAHV BEAT- "Embrace the Spirit"

Thanks to all of you who participated in the ten district meetings that Pat, Melva and I attended during the fall. The programs ranged from subjects on autism, to customer service, to the health of our children. Each one of the meetings provided an excellent educational venue for the attendees.

At the ten district meetings, there were 139 healthcare organizations represented with a total of 1371 volunteers and healthcare administrators attending. The speakers were outstanding, the reports were exceptional, the hospitality was welcoming, and the company of volunteers gathered was the "best of the best." Texas Healthcare Volunteers, you are truly "the heartbeat of healing."

Now, let us reflect on what we have learned and take a look at the environment in which we find ourselves today. The economy is unstable, folks are being laid off, our hospitals are suffering financially with some of them even closing, our volunteer gift shops and fundraising efforts are feeling the effects of this downward spiral, and people, in general, are anxious about the future.

What can we as healthcare volunteers do in times like these? I believe we can do what volunteers do best - we can serve others.

We can embrace the words of Dr. Dan Stultz, President and CEO of THA, in his remarks to us at the TAHV convention in Austin last year. He challenged us "to keep our focus as we go about the marvelous work that we do." Our mission as healthcare volunteers is to enhance the delivery of healthcare services to our fellow Texans. We must not lose sight of this goal.

We can project a positive attitude to all of our customers – patients, staff, visitors, and our fellow volunteers. Attitudes are contagious.

"Each of us makes his own weather, determines the color of the skies in the emotional universe which he inhabits."-Fulton J. Sheen

We can go the extra mile for our hospitals and other healthcare organizations in a spirit of willingness and enthusiasm.

"Power consists in your capacity to link your will with the purpose of others."-Woodrow Wilson

We can promote our healthcare organizations in the community. We can wear our uniforms proudly and share with others our commitment to serve our outstanding healthcare organization.

We can meet people where they are, not according to our agendas, but according to their needs. A good listener is a walking, touching, personal intensive care unit.

"You give but little when you give of your possessions, it is when you give of yourself that you truly give."-The Prophet

As healthcare volunteers, we cannot solve the economic crisis our nation is facing, but we can create a haven of safety for those whose needs bring them to our doors. In these troubled times, we must not lose focus. As volunteers, we can bring the heartbeat of healing to all those we serve, if we will only "Embrace the Spirit."

Let's just DO IT.

In the spirit of volunteering, Janie

HOLIDAY CHEER FILLS THE AIR

Greenhill School staff and students, and volunteers (or Holiday Elves) Hannah Neustadt in the green shirt and Santa hat on the front row, Jordy Neustadt, standing directly behind Hannah in the Santa Hat, and Bruce Neustadt, farthest to the right. Bruce has been one of TSRHC's evening volunteers since 1989 and since then his two daughters (in picture) have become junior volunteers and work with him on Thursday nights.

The holidays were blazing bright at Texas Scottish Rite Hospital for Children (TSRHC) on December 2nd as more than 400 hospital friends and community volunteers gathered for the annual Holiday Tree Trimming Party. The evening was kicked off with the lighting of the Great Christmas Tree in the hospital atrium and the holiday elves led in signing "We Wish You a Merry Christmas". Musical entertainment throughout the evening was provided by the Town North Concert Band. Santa Claus was also on hand to share holiday joy and supervise the decorating.

Following the program, the community volunteers and their TSRHC volunteer hosts dispersed throughout the hospital to decorate the trees assigned to them. More than fifty trees were decorated by the volunteers, and they were visible in every area of the hospital ensuring that the warmth of the holiday season surrounds the patients and families. Even the hospital grounds were dressed in splendor for the season.

Forty-four community groups decorated trees and each tree uniquely reflected the personality of the group who decorated it. One of the favorite trees this year was the "Recycle Tree" presented by the students of the Greenhill Lower School which encouraged visitors and staff to reduce, reuse, and recycle by showing casing ornaments and decorations the students made by using recycled materials.

All the community groups displayed such creativity in decorating their trees. The favorite part of the event is seeing the groups have a "blast" while decorating their trees, and then seeing the reaction of the patients, families, and the hospital staff the morning after when they see the decorated trees.

After working up an appetite while decorating the trees, the volunteers and community partners enjoyed dinner together. It was a time for reflection upon the season for giving and the opportunity we have to share with our community. Also, as volunteers we are ambassadors for the vision of the hospital in places where we live and work.

The heartbeat of healing

The hospital is under repair, the children are not present, but the heartbeat of healing continues through the loyal and caring spirit of some of the hospital volunteers, even under these circumstances. It was recently reported that due to the economic situation, there may not be financial resources available to re-open this valuable hospital. The volunteers remain hopeful that funding can be provided.

Lots of families arrive at the Emergency Department with nothing but the clothes on their backs. Everything they own has been destroyed by fire. One of the services that the volunteers render is to collect, sort, and staff the clothing room, making clean clothing available to those in need. Since Ike, some of the volunteers have continued to serve in this capacity, working in the community.

Susie Martin, President-Elect of their auxiliary, and Sylvia Dorman, Corresponding Secretary, are pictured at work in the Fellowship Hall of the Central United Methodist Church, where Sylvia's husband is the pastor. They ask for our prayers - for the hospital, for its patients and for the volunteers as they all strive to recover from this devastating storm.

Hats Off to Hospitals and Their Volunteers!

April 19-25 is National Volunteer Week, and May 10-16 is National Hospital Week. These designated weeks are an opportunity to recognize volunteers as well as hospital employees and to celebrate their contributions to the community! The theme for Volunteer Week is "Volunteers: The Heart of Health Care" and the theme for Hospital Week is "A Healthy Commitment in Changing Times."

We had absolutely wonderful & inspirational speakers! They all fit with Janie's theme of helping our children. The stories we heard of the endurance and sadness of our children brought tears, and we were moved beyond belief at the length people have gone to in order to ease the suffering and heartbreak of these children. There are so many caring people and we met some of the best!

We also had the pleasure of meeting some absolutely fantastic volunteers. Their hospitality was outstanding. Each meeting was the "best"! Our sincere thanks to all of the District Coordinators, all the volunteers, and everyone who worked so hard to help make these meetings such a success.

The Heartbeat of Healing

In early September, Hurricane Gustav posed a threat to the Texas Gulf Coast. The young patients at the Shriners' Children's Hospital in Galveston were evacuated to other Shriners facilities in Houston, Austin, and San Antonio. A staff member accompanied each patient and remained with the patient.

The children and staff have not returned to Galveston, because even though Gustav did not come ashore in Galveston, days later Hurricane Ike ravaged the Texas coast, doing extensive damage to the Children's Hospital.

Junior Volunteers Wilson N. Jones Medical Center

The Wilson N. Jones Medical Center Auxiliary says, "Our Junior volunteers seem to improve yearly" .. They are dependable, courteous, dedicated and always eager to learn. The group of outstanding young people, pictured here, has reached the epitome of anything we could expect them to achieve.

Our Junior Volunteer program began in 1999 with only a small number of students with an interest in helping. It has grown every year and this past group totaled 28 students who were anxious to help anytime and anyplace. Some of the areas where they serve include Surgery, Emergency Room, Radiology, Information Desk, and the Gift Shop For starters. A total of 2,405 hours was cheerfully given to our Medical Center by these exceptional future leaders, and we are so proud of all they accomplish!!!

A note from the TAHV Parliamentarian

By: Jan Temple

Are you having a problem in your auxiliary/volunteer group getting officers? Do you have an officer in place who would continue to serve if asked but can't because of your Bylaws? Do your Bylaws restrict the term limits for officers to a certain number of years? If this is something your nominating committee is faced with, then perhaps you need to revisit your Bylaws and make them more flexible.

On the other hand, the down side to doing this is that once someone takes an office, and serves for several years, it might be difficult for a future nominating committee to try to put someone new in that position without possibly causing hurt feelings. Ideally your group should always be vigorously looking for potential candidates for offices and mentoring those folks. After having looked at both sides of the problem, it boils down to the fact that:

- each group is different
- each has to assess their own situation and
- each must come to a conclusion that best suits their needs.

Having served on nominating committees I know that it isn't easy trying to get people to assume the responsibilities of an officer. My best wishes to you in your quest to find officers.

Do You Know ????

The Difference in County Hospitals and District Hospitals

Is your healthcare system a County Hospital, a District Hospital, or an Investor-Owned Hospital? Investor-Owned Hospitals are easily recognized, but often we may not know if our hospital is a County Hospital or a District Hospital. The difference is truly defined, and we, as volunteers, need to be aware of these conditions. We serve as representatives of our hospitals to our communities, and we must be well-informed and knowledgeable on these issues. Some county taxpayers are considering and preparing to vote to establish hospital districts.

Hospitals must meet the needs of patients, employees, and expand services that must be employed to provide new technology that can identify illnesses and save lives? The decision that taxpayers must make is whether to accept higher taxes to keep the current standard. Insecure economies could lead to reduced services and raise taxes in all types of healthcare systems.

County Hospitals

Hospital boards are appointed by county commissioners and held accountable to the commissioners and are unpaid positions.

Funds that are designated for a county hospital may not be used for a hospital district if a conversion or change has been made.

Hospital Districts

Districts have a taxing entity with power to make its own budget and is controlled by an elected board of managers. This board is elected and held accountable to voters.

With the downturn of the economy, the county tax base could be greatly reduced. If a district is established, could it pay for extended services and current technologies? Which taxing entity would better a hospital if it is to become a highly-evaluated hospital where the neighboring communities would come rather than travel long distances for care? This is not an easy decision to make for communities.

Memorial Garden Rekindles Bill Lannom's Passion

Taken from an article in the Fort Stockton Pioneer dated October 16, 2008

The Pecos County Memorial Auxiliary in Fort Stockton had begun a major project for the hospital and the city – a memorial garden at their hospital. This garden was a $250,000 project planned for the south side of the hospital. They had raised some funds and had begun work with the aid of an architect; however their project seemed to be stymied with the lack of passionate professionals who could forge ahead with the work. The volunteers and chairs of the project began looking over their community and their resources and as often is the case, the passionate professional arrived on the scene. This professional was a “home-town boy” returning to his native Fort Stockton to live. He had decided to relocate in Fort Stockton for any number of reasons. When approached about the project he said that he loved the idea of combining design and building and loved the dynamics of construction which he found more challenging than design. The volunteers felt that this was dream come true.” He had returned to help his brother remodel several houses to sell.

Upon checking his portfolio, they found that he had worked in Hawaii and a 3,000-home master community in Prince Georges County, Md. His previous work was coming to bear on this. He said that he had his passion back and added his own touches to it, which is what was needed – putting a lot of himself into this. He revitalized the project and put a lot of himself into it.

The architect said he felt revitalized with the work and became directly involved and attentive to details. This work gave his brother and him an opportunity to give something back to the community. He remembered the care that the community had given his mother and father after the couple lost their home to an explosion and fire. He and his brother felt they owed something to the community because of the care they gave their parents.

The architect set to work improving the original plan and they added a water feature which will be located just outside the Auxiliary gift shop in the hospital. It is called the Tres Cruces de Sana-cion – Three Crosses of Healing. Lannom, the architect, stated that one of main reasons that Fort Stockton even exists is the oasis in a desert landscape that takes him back to the springs that dotted the area landscape during his youth.

Also involved in this project is the nursery who is providing plant selection. Local people are interested and fascinated with the project and want to be involved. This involvement also contributed to the fundraising project. Area companies are also committed to participate. More than $100,000 has been secured.

This is the story, a success story in fact, of a group of volunteers in a very small community with a passion and dream of helping their community, and the arrival of the person at the proper time with the perfect talents and passion to bring this project to completion. Lannom, the architect, comments that, “Once it’s done; we’ll have something that everyone can be proud of.”

We applaud Fort Stockton for their efforts and will be interested in the progress of this project.

Architect's Sketch of Garden

Wall breaking ceremony for Ronald McDonald Family Room at Edinburg Children's Hospital

Thursday, January 8, 2009, The official wall breaking ceremony for the first Ronald McDonald Family Room took place at Edinburg Children's Hospital. It will include three overnight sleeping rooms along with a living room/lounge, kitchen, laundry and bathroom/shower facilities. Its' South-west interior décor and amenities are intended to provide families with a break from the hospital setting. The project is part of a $1.8 million plan, by Ronald McDonald House Charities to expand its services by establishing facilities in five area hospitals in the next 3-5 years. The new facilities, called Ronald McDonald Family Rooms -- will provide comfort and care to parents in a similar fashion to that provided by a Ronald McDonald House, but within the walls of the host hospital. Some planned Family Rooms will have overnight sleeping accommodations, and all will include lounge, kitchen and bathroom/shower facilities
